Course title	PRAGMATICS
Form*	Lecture + tutorial
Level of course	BA/MA
Year/semester	summer semester
ECTS	5
Language of instruction	English
No. of hours	30
Course content	This course provides a comprehensive overview of the foundations of pragmatics. It covers the central theories and approaches as well as key concepts and topics that are characteristic of mainstream pragmatics (deixis, speech acts, implicature, presupposition, politeness, relevance, etc.), i.e. of the traditional and most widespread approach to the means and ways of using language in authentic social contexts. It is assumed that pragmatics deals with meaning-in-context, which for analytic purposes can be viewed from different perspectives (the speaker's, recipient's, analyst's, etc.). It bridges the gap between the system side of language and the use side, and relates both of them at the same time.

Course title	INTERCULTURAL COMMUNICATION
Form*	Tutorial
Level of course	BA/MA
Year/semester	summer semester
ECTS	5
Language of instruction	English
No. of hours	30
Course content	The objective of the course is to familiarize the students with the principles and the dynamics of intercultural communication, in its both interpersonal and institutional dimension. Drawing on various theories discussing language and communication in the context of culture, the course explores verbal and non-verbal, implicit and explicit ways of coding, communicating and negotiating cultural meanings. Its scope of interest will thus include issues of cultural identity, collectivist vs. individualist societies, communication/negotiation styles, politeness and indirectness in communication, conceptualization of time and space, linguistic manifestations of power, nonverbal communication, etc.

Language of instruction	English
No. of hours	30
Course content	The aim of the course, which combines theoretical knowledge with practical skills necessary for effective functioning in culturally diverse professional environments, is to familiarize students with the dynamics and principles of intercultural communication in both interpersonal and institutional dimensions. Based on a range of theories related to language and communication in the context of culture, the course explores verbal and nonverbal, implicit and explicit methods of encoding, communicating, and negotiating cultural meanings, as well as broadly defined cultural diversity management. The course emphasizes critical thinking and problem-solving through case studies, role-playing, and simulations reflecting challenges in real professional contexts. Students will develop skills in analyzing and interpreting culturally conditioned communication patterns, identifying potential communication barriers, and proposing strategies to enhance understanding and collaboration.

Course content	The course focuses on the language used in the media. We will venture into numerous public spaces, genres and contexts in order to see how media (including New Media) “create pictures in our minds”, how identities are constructed, and power negotiated and challenged. We will examine the interface between media and society, and analyse various forms and strategies of communication across different genres, including Twitter, Facebook and blogs. We will also try to discover how persuasion and manipulation work and how a given medium, for instance the Internet, shapes communicative practices.

Course title	Constructing 'the Other' in English literature
Form*	tutorial
Level of course	BA
Year/semester	2nd year, summer semester
ECTS	5
Language of instruction	English
No. of hours	30
Course content (max. 1000 characters)	This course explores the construction and deconstruction of "Otherness" in various works of English literature, focusing particularly on medieval and early modern popular literature, as well as Victorian and postmodern fiction. We will examine a range of texts, including popular ballads, romances, short stories, tales, and fragments of plays and novels. Through these works, we will investigate how different literary forms centre their narrative voices, plots, and characters around the figure of the Other and how they engage in the discourses of physical difference and monstrosity, ethnic and religious prejudice, anti-feminism, and witchcraft.

Form*	tutorial
Level of course	BA
Year/semester	2nd year, summer semester

Language of instruction	English
No. of hours	30
Course content (max. 1000 characters)	It's a plain fact that people around the world speak a multitude of languages. Linguists investigate both individual languages and compare whole sets of languages (sometimes rather sizable). The course is meant as a basic introduction to this branch of linguistics. Some questions to which you may get answers (albeit sometimes only partial): <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • How does one classify languages? • What makes languages similar? • What properties are shared by all languages (or at least most of them)? • How many languages can you actually compare in one study? 4 is imaginable, but as many as 14? Or 40? That would be crazy, wouldn't it? 400? Relax with the zeroes, please... • If it's impossible to consider all languages in a single study (and it certainly is), how do you choose the ones you compare? • How on earth can you meaningfully analyse languages you don't speak yourself? • What makes languages one doesn't know strange, difficult or... funny? While we won't actually learn any languages while analysing these issues (and more), we will certainly learn a lot about them. The course will also offer room to share your knowledge of languages you know and observations about them. The experience should also help you see English in a new light.

Course title	Faces of conflict, crisis and security in the contemporary Polish political discourse
Form*	Tutorial
Level of course	BA
Year/semester	2nd year, summer semester
ECTS	5
Language of instruction	English
No. of hours	30
Course content	This course will employ tools of rhetorical and argumentation research, and critical cognitive discourse studies (discourse space research, metaphor analysis, proximization) to explore patterns of legitimization discourse used by top Polish political parties to claim state leadership in the years 2015–2024. In the first two months we will study the discourse of Law & Justice (PiS), a far-right conservative party ruling Poland from October 2015 to October 2023. We will look at L&J’s strategies of leadership legitimization involving socio-ideological polarization, strategic generation of internal as well as external conflict, threat construction and crisis management. In its second part, the course will focus on the apparently more moderate and cooperation oriented discourse strategies implemented by three opposition parties (Civic Platform, Third Way, The New Left) in the lead-up to the 2023 parliamentary elections, in which L&J finally lost power. The aim of the course is to compare and contrast the two discourses, L&J’s and the opposition’s, to speculate about the longevity of radical populist discourses such as L&J’s. We will try to verify the hypothesis that a conflict-charged, polarized populist discourse can be an extremely powerful tool, able to grant long-term political leadership. However, in a yet longer perspective, such a discourse runs a considerable risk of ‘wearing out’ and becoming vulnerable to more forward-looking and pragmatic leadership rhetoric, which presages political change. Altogether, the course promises a unique and authoritative panorama of the Polish state-political discourse, coupled with a thought-provoking picture of ties and mutual dependencies among radical and populist right-wing discourse trends colonizing the 21st century Europe.

Course title	“All but Death, can be Adjusted”: Loss, Grief, and Bibliotherapy
Form*	tutorial
Level of course	BA
Year/semester	2nd year, summer semester
ECTS	5
Language	English
No. of hours	30
Course content (max. 1000 characters)	This course examines various representations, theories, and narratives of loss and grief in literature and culture. Throughout the course, we will investigate how literature and broadly understood artistic endeavors dedicated to death-related themes can help individuals in mourning and the people who accompany and support them. Utilizing diverse literary genres, critical texts, and experiences from daily life, we will analyze different types of loss, trajectories of grief, and psycho-social models and approaches to the experience of bereavement. We will also delve into the fundamental aspects of bibliotherapy, exploring its different types, therapeutic goals, and source materials. Upon completion of the course, students will be equipped with the tools for the critical analysis of the cultural construction of grief and will be able to offer more informed support. Key Course Questions <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The main questions this course seeks to answer include: • Do we all experience grief in the same way, or do cultural norms shape our experience? • What are the most common reactions to loss, and how are they reflected in literary texts? • What should we say (or not say) when someone close to us is grieving? • How do people try to tame their fear of death through cultural rituals, literature, and art? • What are the main stages of the bibliotherapeutic process? • What sources and techniques are used in bibliotherapeutic settings? • How can we use books to create meaning and build resilience in the face of loss? • What mourning rituals still exist, and how have they evolved? While the leading theme of this course may strike some as grave or even morbid, the works analyzed offer not only comforting and relatable ideas but also a wealth of insight into loss, and sometimes even dark humor. The course topics can help facilitate a more constructive confrontation with the one thing none of us can ultimately avoid. Important Notes on Course Content! The content of this course can be cognitively demanding and emotionally challenging. While the instructor seeks to foster a safe, amicable, and respectful learning environment, if students anticipate difficulty discussing the above or other sensitive topics, another elective might be more suitable. Active and regular class participation is an essential part of the course.

No. of hours	30
Course content (max. 1000 characters)	Yiddish was the traditional language of the Jewish people in Poland and Eastern Europe for centuries. Gradually, this unique culture and language would spread far and wide, to the United States, Canada, Argentina, and beyond, impacting local cultures and pop culture in one form or another. The children of Yiddish-speaking immigrants from Poland and Eastern Europe pretty well invented Hollywood, the comic book superhero (Superman and Batman are Jewish; Spider-Man is half Jewish, half Czech), and Las Vegas as we know it today. Literature, cinema, and theater also grew from the Yiddish language and culture. Of course, Łódź played a central role in the story, being the second largest Yiddish center in Europe (after Warsaw) before the Second World War, the third largest in the world. Yiddish, no doubt, impacted Polish culture, and vice versa. Curiously, feminism also has an interesting role in the history, Yiddish being the so-called “mama-loshen,” the mother tongue, the mother language. This course will look at the incredible world of Yiddish language and culture, in English, with a multi-media approach, looking at film, music, radio, and more.

Course title	Fearing Apocalypse or Hoping for It? Exploring the Potential of the Crisis of Humanity
Form*	Tutorial
Level of course	BA
Year/semester	2nd year, summer semester
ECTS	5
Language of instruction	English
No. of hours	30
Course content	Apocalyptic images and narratives have always fuelled literature and culture. Diagnosing the wrongs of humanity, they were to discipline us, but also to encourage change. Apocalypse, after all, is never really the ultimate end, but primarily a chance to start anew. During our classes, we will be looking at various texts – mainly novels and films – that present diverse forms of apocalypse and post-apocalyptic struggles. We will be focusing on two aspects of those texts. First, what the given form of apocalypse means, what it says about humanity, and what function it fulfils. Whether a cataclysmic event, an alien visitation, a mutating virus, bacteria or fungus, or a climactic disaster, each apocalypse illustrates specific anxieties and fears of our fragile civilization, and by scrutinizing those we can better understand the complex cultural function of apocalypse. Secondly, it is interesting to see how humanity copes with such liminal events, and how postapocalyptic lives are envisaged in fiction. Those various survival narratives are equally informative, giving us insight into our hopes, and allowing us to explore alternative futures. In those catastrophic scenarios, therefore, I wish to seek spaces for constructive discussion on what makes us, and our lives, worthwhile, opening paths to optimistic posthuman thinking. Although I would be happy to consult the reading/watching list with the group to best meet your interests, I would suggest exploring such texts as: Warm Bodies (Isaak Marion’s novel and/or its film adaptation directed by Jonathan Levine), The Girl with All the Gifts (dir. by Colm McCarthy), Annihilation (Jeff VanderMeer’s novel and/or its film adaptation directed by Alex Garland), Aniara (dir. by Pella Kagerman and Hugo Lilja), The Stone Gods (Jeanette Winterson).

From the rise of social media platforms to the proliferation of online gaming communities, digital spaces have given birth to new forms of linguistic expression. The course Internet Linguistics explores the evolving role of language in these online environments, examining how the internet has transformed communication. In this course, students will explore the linguistic features of digital discourse and how social media platforms shape language use. Key themes include the impact of technology on language, linguistic creativity in online spaces, the intersection of language and identity, and the role of language in social movements. Students will gain practical insights into the linguistics of social media and internet subcultures. By the end of the course, students will have a comprehensive understanding of how digital communication influences language, along with a critical perspective on the future of language in the digital world.

Course title	Comics, graphic novels or sequential art? An introduction to comics studies
Form*	tutorial
Level of course	BA
Year/semester	2nd year, summer semester

Language of instruction	English
No. of hours	30
Course content (max. 1000 characters)	Most of us know what comics is and titles such as Garfield, Peanuts, Thorgal, Donald Duck, Batman, Superman, Spider-Man or Asterix and Obelix are recognised as familiar cultural codes and cultural icons. Despite their initial popularity, comics were perceived as a form of entertainment directed mainly at younger audiences which were not worthy of scholarly attention. This preconception began to change in 1986, which was the groundbreaking year for the medium, and it continues to evolve with the emergence and development of the Marvel Cinematic Universe (MCU). The aim of the course is to familiarise students with the verbal and visual language of various forms of sequential art, and of comics in particular. This class is perfect for anyone and everyone who would like to delve deeper into this medium from an academic standpoint. The course will discuss numerous topics, for instance, the definition of comics, the history of the medium, semiotics of comics, genres, and the relationship between comics and other media. Apart from exploring the theory of comics, student will also have the opportunity to get acquainted with the most significant and celebrated titles among American and European graphic narratives such as Art Spiegelman's Maus, Alan Moore's Watchmen, Frank Miller's The Dark Knight Returns, Alison Bechdel's Fun, and others.

Course content	It was long ago, but not as long as it seems: it started when the Berlin Wall fell and ended when the Twin Towers collapsed. In between, grunge replaced hair metal, irony was a form of currency, and having a personal brand was so uncool as to be unthinkable. “The video for ‘Smells Like Teen Spirit’ was not more consequential than the reunification of Germany,” writer Chuck Klosterman reminds us (with perhaps a hint of irony), but there were epiphenomena like Lilith Fair, Lollapalooza and Titanic, the rise of the internet, pre-9/11 politics, and the paradoxical belief that nothing was more humiliating than trying too hard. Pop culture accelerated without algorithms that remembered everything and on any given Thursday night, more people watched a random episode of Seinfeld than the finale of Game of Thrones. This course will explore some key elements from the pivotal decade of the 1990s: from Boyz n the Hood to The Big Lebowski, The Backstreet Boys to Britney Spears, Michael Jordan to Oprah Winfrey, Friends to Fight Club, and the myriad changes regarding race, class, and sexuality. The '90s brought about a revolution in the human condition that we are still scrambling to understand. Or whatever.

Course content (max. 1000 characters)	The course covers different aspects of drama, theatre, and performance in the twentieth and twenty-first century. We concentrate mainly on British, Irish and American works to consider how the forms of writing and performing have evolved through time. The course looks at modern forms of realism, tragedy, comedy, satire and farce or the absurd as main genres of dramatic writing. The aim of the course is thus to see how theatre and performance art react to changing cultural, political and social conditions. The reading list for the course contains works by leading British, Irish and American authors. Sample criticism, introductory theoretical texts, theatre reviews and visual illustration will be provided to offer essential critical concepts necessary for analysis and discussion.

No. of hours	30
Course content (max. 1000 charact	Broadening students' knowledge of contemporary American Literature, the course offers insights into current developments in XXI-century North American writing that focuses on different states of extremity: social, political, economic, as well as technological. How does literature respond to the extreme global phenomena of wars, climate catastrophe, the pandemic, late-capitalism, fascism, racism, or Artificial Intelligence? How are forms of writing in the United States changing and evolving in response to psycho-political pressures and social challenges produced by such realities? We will try to approach these questions reading and discussing some of the most thought-provoking and formally innovative texts by XXI-century North American authors, including Robert Fitterman, Alison Cobb, Divya Victor, Tan Lin, Joey Yearous-Algozin, Kevin Davies, Craig Dworkin, Mark Nowak, Andrea Brady, Kim Rosenfield, and Syd Zolf, among others. Readings will be supplemented by critical and theoretical commentaries on the status of texts in the present-day technologically mediated environment. The class expands the selection of canonical and mainstream works discussed in the American Literature Survey Course by introducing cutting-edge experimental or avant-garde texts that have also significantly transformed the landscape of American writing in recent years.

Course content (max. 1000 characters)	[The course British Literature 4 is a continuation of British Literature 3]. The course examines contemporary British literature—including poetry, short fiction, novels, and drama—to investigate forms of (playful) cultural subversion, transgression of generic and aesthetic conventions, and the transformative potential of “engaged” writing. While such concerns are also present in mainstream literature, they are more frequently and forcefully articulated by writers from social, political, and ethnic minority backgrounds. For this reason, the syllabus focuses on works produced in Great Britain (with particular emphasis on Scotland) as well as in former British colonies such as Canada, Australia, and South Africa.

MULTIMEDIA TECHNOLOGIES IN DEVELOPING INTERCULTURAL COMPETENCE

Language	English
No. of hours	30
Course content (max. 1000 characters)	The aim of this course is to prepare the students to become aware consumers and active providers of the multimedia content in the digitized Web 2.0 environment. Special emphasis is placed on the development of cultural competences in the environment in which the combination of easy access to culture and (perceived) online anonymity can have a detrimental effect on the cross-cultural communication. The participants will learn how to prevent the aforementioned negative effects by developing their digital intercultural competences. The course is composed of three cycles of classes, each devoted to a topic which is related to the reception and production of the digital contents in the context of the language and culture. The aim of the first module is to build infographics (mind maps) which present the stereotypes connected to a given country. The summary of the project is a discussion about the role and the propagation of the stereotype in the contemporary Web culture. In the second module, the students prepare a website whose aim is to present their region. This phase is followed by the discussion about the ways of promoting regional culture and language variety in the globalized world. The last module is devoted to the presentation of the national culture by means of the digital storytelling. Special emphasis is put on the integration of previously-introduced elements (e.g., positive vs negative stereotypes or regional and national culture).

Course content (max. 1000 character	The classes combine a wide range of issues related to culture and communication in a shared social space, where today's dynamically developing media play an extremely important role. The meetings are held in the form of practical workshops and prepare participants to creatively interpret/translate cultural texts relating to current socio-cultural issues such as disability, women's rights, the problems of ethnic, racial, and sexual minorities, and posthumanism. They provide an opportunity for critical reflection on how literature, film, theater, visual arts, performance, music, science and technology, fashion, and others attempt to shape audience awareness. Much attention will be paid to countercultural creators who seek to challenge the social status quo, question the meaning of seemingly obvious and transparent categories, and thus build a positive social identity for members of disadvantaged groups. The curriculum for the 2026/27 academic year covers a broad range of cultural issues, with particular emphasis on cultural transfer, including translation and its importance for developing intercultural awareness. The course explores selected topics from the following: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. disability, <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - an introduction to disability studies and accessibility issues, - the issue of (in)visibility and representation of people with disabilities, - a reflection on debates surrounding disability and the art of acting, - the intersections between disability studies and green humanities, and between disability studies and women's studies, - and a reflection on the problems and opportunities related to disability and transhumanism. 2. Course content	The course will offer students an overview of the history of Central and East European cinema since World War II. The underlying assumption is that shared histories and contexts— WWII, the establishment of Communist regimes and their almost simultaneous dissolution at the end of the 1980s—allow us to see the countries of Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Poland, (former) Yugoslavia, Romania, Bulgaria, Albania as forming a distinct cultural-historical region. However, there are also significant differences between these national cultures and cinemas that need to be considered. Thus, the thematic focus of the course will be on the specific movements and achievements of these national cinemas in the period following the WWII until the present. We will treat film both as an aesthetic phenomenon and as a symbolic reflection of social and political realities, as an eloquent document of times and cultures. This approach is particularly justified in the case of Central and East European cinema, whose specificity is in large part defined by a persistent engagement with social and political issues. We will be discussing the works of many of the most influential and best-known Central European directors (such as Andrzej Wajda, Krzysztof Kieślowski, Dušan Makavejev, Věra Chytilová, Miklós Jancsó, Béla Tarr, Cristian Mungiu) as well as some less well known outside the region.

Course title	FRANCAIS NON STANDARD
Form*	D
Level of course	B2 + / C1
Year/semester	I MASTER / semester 1 and 2
ECTS	4 for each / 8 for both
Language of instruction	French
No. of hours	30 per semester
Course content	Le but de ce cours est de présenter les variantes de la langue française populaire et orale ainsi que de présenter aux étudiants les sources où nous trouvons le français non standard. Ce cours permet de prendre conscience de l'existence d'une langue parlée, familière permettant la communication au quotidien et dans des situations particulières d'échanges verbaux. Ce cours permet aussi d'approfondir ses connaissances dans le domaine de la culture et de la civilisation française. Pendant les cours il y aura un aperçu sur le français non standard en particulier sur l'argot, la langue familière ainsi que des éléments de lexicologie et de néologie.

Form*	D
Level of course	B1+
Year/semester	II / semester 1 and 2
ECTS	4 for each
Language of instruction	French
No. of hours	30 per semester
Course content	Le cours propose un parcours à travers la culture française et francophone des origines au XVII ^e siècle. Le savoir acquis permet non seulement de mieux comprendre la spécificité des phénomènes culturels français, mais aussi d'apprécier la diversité culturelle et de former l'attitude de tolérance. Dans le cadre du cursus, les étudiants acquièrent des outils théoriques et une terminologie spécialisée, nécessaires pour comprendre et analyser les problèmes de la culture contenus par exemple dans les structures langagières. Les participants seront invités à se rendre compte qu'il est impossible de maîtriser une langue étrangère sans une connaissance de base de la culture qui s'en sert. L'objectif visé du cours est aussi de faire connaître aux étudiants les principaux domaines de la culture française et francophone, notamment au seuil de la modernité (Le Moyen-Âge et la Renaissance).

Course content	Le cours se propose d'aborder la problématique liée à l'analyse des textes littéraires, à partir du Moyen Âge jusqu'au XVII ^e siècle. Il a pour objectif de faire connaître aux étudiants les outils les plus signifiants qui permettent d'analyser les œuvres littéraires de différentes époques. Il vise à former la sensibilité esthétique, à développer la capacité de réflexion personnelle, à approfondir les connaissances sur un choix d'auteurs, œuvres, idées et tendances littéraires. En particulier, on se penche sur la notion de genres – narratifs, lyriques et dramatiques – qui subissent à cette époque de profondes mutations. Le but du cours est aussi d'initier à la méthode historique littéraire, soulignant l'importance des conventions formelles et thématiques ainsi que de la réception du patrimoine antique et prémoderne.

L'obiettivo del corso è quello di familiarizzare i partecipanti con le nuove tecnologie utilizzate per facilitare il processo traduttivo, in particolare con l'uso degli strumenti CAT. Saranno trattate le questioni teoriche (regole del funzionamento dei programmi, tecnologie di riferimento), e pratiche. I partecipanti avranno opportunità di usare in modo autonomo i programmi per traduzione automatica dei segmenti testuali nonché avvalendosi di dizionari elettronici, motori di ricerca dei testi paralleli e dei corpora.

The aim of the course is to review the most important currents and directions of contemporary linguistics, through which the so-called communicative turn in linguistics is concretized. The methodological and interpretative foundation, essentially related to conversational analysis, ethnography of speech and sociopragmatics, should provide students with tools useful in the analysis of a number of linguistic and communicative mechanisms and strategies.

Cílem kurzu je:	Cílem kurzu je prohloubit a osvojit jazykové a komunikační dovednosti na úrovni C1. Student kurzu s jazykovou úrovní C1 porozumí širokému spektru náročných a dlouhých textů a rozpozná implicitní významy textů. Bude se plynule a pohotově vyjadřovat bez zjevného hledání výrazů a frází. Zná idiomy, přísloví, frazeologismy. Umí užívat pružně a efektivně jazyk pro společenské, akademické a profesní účely. Uživatel jazyka mající úroveň C1 zvládne vytvořit srozumitelné, dobře uspořádané, podrobné popisy, které jsou pozoruhodné, originální, čímž prokazuje ovládnutí kompozičních útvarů, spojovacích výrazů a prostředků koheze. V písemném projevu dodržuje vysoký stupeň gramatické správnosti, dopouští se triviálních chyb nebo žádných. Ovládá schopnost plynule a spontánně se účastnit rozhovoru s rodilými mluvčími. Umí se aktivně zapojit do diskuze o známých tématech, vysvětlovat své názory, polemizovat.
Tohoto cíle je dosaženo:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - tvorbou rozsáhlých stylisticky rozmanitých písemných textů s využitím frazeologismů, idiomů, rozšířené slovní zásoby (antonyma/synonyma atd.). - produkcí rozhovorů na všechna složitá témata odpovídající typu komunikační situace. - psaním textů prezentující vlastní i cizí názory, stanoviska a soudy v oblasti vědeckého diskurzu (primárně souvisejícího se studovaným oborem, např. současná česká jazyková situace nebo současná česká literární věda) a jejich ústní prezentace ve třídě. - čtením složitějších písemných sdělení obsahujícím různé funkční styly (odborný, umělecký, publicistický, prostě sdělovací). - drilováním základní problematiky skladby českého jazyka, slovosledu (vazby, příklonky), koordinace a determinace (spojovací prostředky), jednočlenná věta, řeč přímá a nepřímá - poslechem dialogů a monologů z televize a rozhlasu, např. zpráv, informací v hromadných sdělovacích prostředcích, publicistických a dokumentárních pořadů, filmů, pohádek, písniček a adaptovaných literárních příběhů.

Student se na II stepenu studija slobodno služi srpskim jezikom na svim jezičkim nivoima, od fonetike, preko leksike, do sintakse i njegovo poznavanje jezika bi, na početku prvog semestra, trebalo da bude na nivou B2, a na početku trećeg B2-C1, sa težnjom da studije završi na nivou C1+, što se na kraju četvrtog semestra I proverava pismenim ispitom iz gramatike i leksike, pisanjem eseja i pismenim prevodima u oba smera, koje predstavljaju uslov za izlazak na usmeni ispit, koje obuhvata gradivo tokom oba stepena studija, uključujući I tematiku iz oblasti književnosti, kulture i tradicije. Student završnog semestra drugog stepena studija razume tekstove koje se odnose na uopštene teme, kao i specijalizovane i apstraktne tekstove. Ume tečno da se služi jezikom, što mu omogućava da se bez problema sporazumeva sa izvornim govornicima bez obzira na temu i situaciju. Pored standardnih gramatičkih pitanja, obrađuje se i tematika izrazito razvijenog i u srpskom jeziku veoma često korišćenog žargona.
